

ENERGY HAIKUS

Haikus are a Japanese style of poetry, whose topics traditionally centre around the natural world. They are very short, with 5 syllables in the first line, then 7 in the second, and a final 5 syllables in the third.

Write your own haiku focusing on the energy sources you've learnt about today! You could even write one for each separate type you've learnt about.

Here are some haikus that we really love as an example:

Oh, tranquility!

Penetrating the very rock,

A cicada's voice.

- Matsuo Basho

A world of dew,

And within every dewdrop

A world of struggle.

- Kobayashi Issa

Everything I touch

with tenderness, alas,

pricks like a bramble.

- Kobayashi Issa

After killing

a spider, how lonely I feel

in the cold of night!

- Masaoka Shiki
