

INFLIGHT ENTERTAINMENT

We need some in-flight entertainment!

The longest commercial flights last over 16 hours, and passengers need something to keep them busy!

Although staring out the window at the clouds and the land below is interesting, you might need something else to shake it up for a flight that long.

Make your own in-flight entertainment, either by writing and performing a script to go on the aeroplane TVs, or by writing and designing an aeroplane magazine!

Either way, you've got to think of what would be most fun while up in the air, and what would make time pass the fastest!

You could include puzzles in your magazine, or a quiz format in your TV show to get passengers' minds working, or go for pure narrative and just write or perform a great, engaging story.
